

SkillsUSA is preparing the next generation of skilled workers. To help understand what a SkillsUSA experience looks like, we will introduce you to one of our veteran students, Henry. While this story is unique to one member, it represents the thousands of students who have come before and the opportunity we have to serve so many more in the future.

Meet, Henry!

In 8th grade Henry joined SkillsUSA and began competing in culinary arts and extemporaneous speaking. That same year he ran and was elected for state officer. He also was selected to serve as a voting Delegate at that year's national conference. As just a freshman he served as Sargent at arms while competing once again in culinary arts. He served as a delegate at that year's national conference as well. As a sophomore he served as the state parliamentarian. Henry's Junior year he began competing through the engineering program at Sno-isle technical school. Additionally He served as the state Vice President. His senior year Henry was elected by his peers to serve as state President. He continue his training in the aerospace manufacturing program at Sno-isle Tech while serving his term. He competed in the aerospace assembler competition. That same year, as President he attended a board of directors meeting held at Boeing in Renton, WA hosted by Dan Parker. It was here that he was given the opportunity to meet him and make the connection which opened doors for Henry. In the spring Henry competed in the aerospace assembler competition where he met and networked with Boeing managers and at the competition was given an opportunity to interview. Fast forward a few short weeks Henry was offered in the spring of his senior year a job at Boeing. He did have to wait until he turned 18 to start working so in October of 2019 just after his 18th birthday Henry began his career just out of High school at one of the largest Aerospace employers in the world.

This story is not the exception but rather the common outcome of SkillsUSA. Partnering with SkillsUSA opens up employers, like you a whole new untouched pool of skilled students eager to work, learn and impress.
